English Grammar Class 8

Interjections

A word or phrase that is grammatically distinct from the words around it and m ostly rreflects feeling rather than meaning is called an interjection.

Image: Interjections

Example

- Ouch! I was hurt.
- Wow! Did you see that pricey vehicle?
- Hurrah! The match was won by us!
- Wow! What a lovely timepiece. (joyful emotion)
- Oh! Never mind bringing my bag!
- Huh! Not to me!
- Eww! It has such a bad flavour! (feeling of dislike)
- Ah, that's so pleasant.
- Thank you! Without you, I would not have been able to

Interjection can be used in the following cases:

- Interjections Used to Greet

Greet someone or express your care for them with a greeting interjection.

For instance, Hi!, Ahoy! , Goodbye! , Etc.

1. Hi! How is your current health?
2. Hello! Peter, how are you?
3. Hi! How is the business doing for you?
4. Hey! Don't be so gloomy.
5. Hello! Is anyone in the room?

- Interjections of Delight

Joyful outbursts are used to convey happiness or joy in response to an event, piece of news, or good surprise.

For instance, yahoo, wow, hurray, etc.

1. Hurray! My poetry is in the publication.
2. Wow! The programme is excellent.
3. Wow! Her home is tastefully furnished.
4. Yippee! We will find parking.
5. Hurray! The prize is mine.

- Interjections of Approval and Appreciation

When the speaker wants to convey that he strongly approves and agrees he will employ one of these interjections. Among them is Bravo! , fantastic! Etc.

1. Bravo! John is the wicket-taker.
2. Good work! You did an excellent job.
3. Bravo! Richard has succeeded.
4. Brilliant! Your essay is beneficial.

- Attentional Interjections

Attention-grabbing comments are used to get someone's attention. For instance, "look," "listen," "behold," "hush," etc. Interjections of Attention, are entirely distinct from Interjections.

1. Listen! Do what I direct, please!
2. Behold! You're going too far!
3. Hush! Someone is approaching us!
4. Ssh! Quiet down otherwise you'll wake everyone up!

- Surprising Interjections

To convey surprise at an incident, one uses interjections.

Examples include Eek, booh, eep, oh no, gee (really?), and oops.

1. Eek! a snake!
2. Booh! You felt fear!
3. Eep! I have no desire to harm you!
4. Oh no! The juice was spilt by me.
5. Gee! How thoughtful of you!
6. Oops! Is it painful?

Image:Huh(interjection of surprise)

- Interjections of Sadness

To indicate grief or sorrow, one uses an interjection of sorrow.

Examples include "Aah," "aww," "ouch," "boohoo," "oww," "Alas," and others.

They are employed to convey melancholy or pity over an event, a person, or eve n pain experienced by oneself.

1. Aah! My purse is gone!
2. Aww! Stupid boy!
3. Ouch! My ankle was sprained!
4. Boohoo! Inside, I'm crying!

(Boohoo is frequently used to mimic crying.)

5. What a pain!
6. Alas! His ordeal was over.

- Understanding/Misunderstanding Interjections.

Convey one's understanding of a topic being discussed or something that wasn't previously properly understood, interjections of understanding and misunderstanding are utilized.

Such as Aha! Therefore, you let the dogs out. The speaker suggests that he had no prior knowledge of who had let the dogs out, but that he has since learned who it was and has used the interjection "Aha!" to convey his understanding.

Eh? on the other hand, is a misunderstanding interjection in which the speaker expresses disbelief. It may occasionally be employed as a form of taunting someone for a deed or statement.

Example: Eh? You're a good baseball player!

In the examples and tasks that follow, we will fully comprehend these interjecti ons.

1. Aha! So you were it!
2. Ahh! It's mine!
3. Eh? I failed to grasp it!

- Additional Interjections

In addition to the interjections covered in the previous chapters, numerous other interjections can be used to convey a variety of emotions, including anger, annoyance—especially annoyance over something stupid—dejection caused by any individual or event, and dismissal or disapproval of a person or action. Please carefully go through the explanations and exercises that follow to obtain a better understanding of these often used interjections.

1. Urgh! I advised you against doing that. (Annoyance/displeasure)
2. Grr! What kind of absurd behaviour is this? (Anger)
3. Argh! The automobile malfunctioned! (Disappointment/frustration/Anger)
4. Aw! Maintain your trust! (mild disapproval or dismay)
5. Bah! He received what he was due! (dismissive irritation)
6. Boo! Leave the field now! (With disdain and scorn)
7. Duh! The AC wasn't turned on by you. (Frustration over negligence)

Image: Types of interjections.

Rules for Inserting Interjections.

- Without altering the sentence's grammar, we merely add an interjection to give it more force. This is done to make sure that the latter is still grammatically sound even without the extra interjection.

- It's not always necessary for interjections to come first in a statement. They may emerge at the beginning, the end, or any other point the subject chooses to add a feeling or mood.
- In rare circumstances, a comma may be used in place of the exclamation mark after an interjection. This typically occurs when the interjection is intended to reflect a softer sentiment.
- An interjection may occasionally be followed by a question mark rather than an exclamation point.
- An interjection may occasionally be followed by a question mark rather than an exclamation point. This occurs when the interjection is followed by an exclamation point asking a question. This occurs when an interjection is used in conjunction with a sentence that asks a question or anticipates a response.
- Interjections can be used in creative or fictional writing, most frequently in dialogue.

Difficult words

Word	Meaning
Appreciation	Praise
Delight	Joy
Melancholy	Sad
Frequently	Mostly
Fictional	Unreal

Summary:

An interjection is a word or phrase that is grammatically distinct from the words around it and mostly reflects feeling rather than meaning. Interjections can be used to convey happiness or joy in response to an event, piece of news, or good surprise. They are also used to express your care for someone with a greeting interjection. are examples of understanding and misunderstanding interjections used to convey one's understanding of a topic being discussed or something that wasn't previously understood. can convey anger, annoyance and annoyance over something stupid, and dismissal or disapproval of a person or action.

Practice Questions

1. Identify the interjections in each of the expressions below to express what emotions:

1. Look! The enemy is marching!
2. Demise! Where are you stinging?
3. Hurray for hip-hop!
4. Kudos! Excellent photo.
5. Fie! a soldier who fears conflict!
6. Oh no! My grandfather is gone.
7. Oh! How rogue he is!
8. Congratulations, dear nice and dependable friend!

2. The interjection worksheet instructions are as follows: Find the interjection and highlight it in the following sentences.

1. Hello, I'm delighted you could attend my celebration.
2. Wow! Tonight, you look fantastic.
3. Bravo, that was the best performance I've ever seen.
4. You're crazy, bah, you broke my favorite toy.
5. Hmm, I wonder where I put my wallet and keys.
6. When miners hit gold, they used to yell, "Eureka!"
7. When the woman noticed the cat slurping milk from her cereal bowl, she yelled, "Shoo!"
8. I assume it means the movie is over, oh well.

9. Stop now! A helmet should always be worn when riding a bike.
10. Yippee! I created this image entirely on my own!

Answers:

1)

1. Attention
2. Calling
3. joy
4. Approval
5. Contempt
6. Sorrow
7. Surprise
8. Approval.

2)

1. Hello!
2. Wow!
3. Bravo!
4. Bah!
5. Hmm!
6. Eureka!
7. Shoo!
8. Oh!
9. Stop now!
10. Yippee!